- hereinafter referred to as Contributor -

The Contributor makes available to Univention GmbH, Mary-Somerville Str.1, 28359 Bremen, Germany, (hereinafter referred to as Univention) any original work of authorship including any modifications or additions to an existing work, that is intentionally submitted by the contributor to Univention for inclusion in, or documentation of, any of the products owned or managed by Univention (hereinafter referred to as "Work"), which may be licensed to third parties by Univention subject to different conditions (hereinafter referred to as Univention software). They are made available with the objective of integrating the corresponding work into the Univention software. In doing so, neither Univention's right to the free licensing of Univention software including the Contributor's work nor the Contributor's right to the free licensing of their work should be restricted. In this respect, the Contributor declares the following:

1. The Contributor confirms that they hold the copyright and all user rights to the work they have passed on to Univention. The Contributor confirms that these user rights to the work have not previously been provided to third parties as exclusive user rights.
2. Univention confirms the acceptance of the work by means of the compilation of the work with the software.
3. The Contributor only assigns simple and non-exclusive user rights to the work to Univention. The Contributor remains entitled to replicate, to edit, to reproduce publicly and to make the work available under the AGPL or other licenses insofar as this is done in accordance with the software licences used by them to create the software expansion.
